Front Cover: Tall bearded iris EDGE OF PARADISE
Welcome to our 2018 online catalogue in which we offer a range of new tall bearded iris from John Taylor, plus a wide selection of the latest and best iris from around the world. A printed catalogue is also available, while stocks last. The printed catalogue is an abbreviated version of the online catalogue. The printed catalogue features all the photos included in the online catalogue plus some additional garden shots.

We have had a very exciting 2016/2017 including receiving many awards for our iris. TB RUSTY TAYLOR won the 2016 Dykes Medal. That makes 19 Dykes Medal wins for Graeme! TB OUR MAN BUCK and LA MINERAL SPRINGS where 1st and 2nd runners up. The Alan Johnson Medal (best Bearded Iris in the NSW Region trial garden) was given to John's TB DIAMOND NECKLACE and PCNI Seedling 14-101 won the Gordon Loveridge Medal (best Beardless Iris in the NSW Region trial garden). Awards of Merit were received for TBs ROCKY ROGUE, DIAMOND NECKLACE, FOR GABRIELLE, LUCY IN THE SKY, and PCNI's 13-9, 13-14, 13-21, 13-64.

We are also excited with the many new iris we have imported over the last few years from the US and now have growing on. Some appear in this year's catalogue and others will be released over coming years.

Due to demand we have included in this year's catalogue a selection of Spuria Iris. Spuria iris are magnificent garden subjects and we strongly recommend them to you. Also, while not listed in the catalogue we continue to sell lots of Louisiana iris. We have replanted all the Louisiana Iris this year but for this year we will only be selling Louisianas as collections of mixed colours (all labelled and named) at $10 per plant. See page 98.

The NSW Region of the Iris Society of Australia will hold its 2017 Annual Show on Saturday and Sunday 21st/22nd October 2017 between 11am and 4pm on Saturday and between 9am and 3pm on Sunday at the BLACKHEATH COMMUNITY HALL, Great Western Highway, BLACKHEATH. We will be there with a stall selling bare rooted TBs and potted Californian Iris.

We are also looking forward to having a stall at the 2018 Collectors Plant Fair on Saturday and Sunday 7th/8th April 2018 at HAWKESBURY Racecourse. For more details visit www.collectorsplantfair.com

We hope you enjoy our new catalogue and we look forward to seeing you in the spring.

BEARDED IRIS

Notes on Culture

Bearded Iris (tall bearded, medians and dwarfs) are hardy perennials grown from rhizomes. They are ideal plants for the southern states (VIC, TAS, SA), inland and high country areas of NSW and QLD, coastal NSW south of the central coast and Southern WA. They are not well suited to northern coastal NSW or coastal Queensland.

Bearded iris like cold winters and fertile, alkaline soil. Bearded iris should be planted in open positions that get as much sun as possible. Avoid the use of animal manures near the rhizomes as this may induce rot. We incorporate a small handful of an 8-9 month slow release fertilizer at planting time. Rhizomes are best planted 30cm-50cm apart and such that the top of the rhizome is at ground level. For best results, planting should be done between November and April but bearded iris can be moved at any time of the year without risk of loss. Clumps should be lifted and divided every 3-4 years.

Once planted the rhizomes should be well watered in for about three weeks to a month and then treated as a normal garden plant.

Bearded iris are classified according to height of bloom spikes and bloom period. Dwarfs grow to a maximum height of 40cm, medians from 41cm-70cm and tall bearded are above 70cm in height. The dwarfs flower first followed by the medians with the talls the last to flower. Tall bearded iris can be chosen for their successful cultivation in the Sydney district.

The time of bloom indicated in the descriptions in this catalogue is when they bloom for us and height of spike is approximate for our growing conditions. Whether a variety reblooms is also based on our experience. There will be variation from area to area and garden to garden.

SPURIA IRIS

$12 each or any 5 for $50

Notes on Culture

Spuria Iris are the tallest of all Iris, growing to 1.5m with elegant flowers and attractive foliage. Spuria Iris require full sun and good drainage. Spuria Iris prefer a dry summer so are well suited to many areas of Australia. Leave undisturbed and allow to form large clumps for a great display. Once established, they provide beautiful bloom over an extended period towards the end of the bearded iris season. They die down and go dormant over summer and at this stage require little or no watering. The only problem with them is the small possibility of fungal diseases in autumn when the new shoots appear. This is a problem in high humidity areas and the application of a fungicide in late summer is recommended. We cannot guarantee to replace plants lost through fungal diseases so please give these iris the little extra care that they need in humid areas. Well rotted compost dug into the soil before planting will be beneficial to growth. Plant 5-10cms below ground level and water well when establishing for best results. Fertilise lightly with slow release, organic or inorganic fertilisers. Foliage is beautiful through winter and large clumps are a landscaping delight. They also make good cut flowers, cut before blooms fully open.

Notes on Culture
Californian iris, also referred to as Pacific coast iris, are native iris of the west coast of the US. They are, in general, evergreen and form small, compact plants that send up flowering spikes from early to mid spring. Foliage varies in height from 20cm to 45cm. Bloom sits beautifully above the foliage. While they are found in the foothills of higher ranges, Californian Iris are not alpine plants. They prefer high winter and early spring rain followed by long dryish summers. They tolerate cold in the winter and relish heat in the summer. While full sun is satisfactory in all but the hottest climates, most of these iris will grow best in a semi-shaded position. Care must be taken when dividing and replanting to have only young divisions and only when the new white roots are forming in late autumn, early winter. (mid May to early June). When planting it is very important not to let the root system dry out, and once planted the ground should be kept damp until the plants are actively growing.

Feeding Californian iris consists of a 9 month slow-release fertilizer in mid to late May and then a light feed with a general rose food in early spring. Californian iris can be used extensively in different garden situations. They can be used to give spectacular displays over a long period either as mass plantings in large garden beds or as long rows along paths or driveways. They are also great as feature or spot plantings among other perennials or annuals, they shine like beacons. Another great use is under planting for standardised plants in circular or square beds.

Because these iris grow so well in pots, they can be grown to large potted specimens or used as companion plants in pots of various sizes with other perennials or annuals.

Plants come in a wide range of warm and cool colours - yellow, orange, gold, russet, red, white, shades of blue, violet and purple through to black. There are also pink, apricot, mauve, peach, orchid and heliotrope. With their veining and signal patches many of the Californian Iris are bicolours and bitones. Blending and contrasting styles also add to the beauty.
